

Backbone of London's connectivity

Connectivity across London begins underground. Fibre-optic cables carry data at speed, fed by a group of surface-level data centres. These bring wired and wireless connectivity to buildings and streetscape assets.

